Guillermo Toral is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the IE School of Politics, Economics, and Global Affairs, and a Faculty Affiliate at MIT GOV/LAB. He obtained his PhD in Political Science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 2020, and an MPhil in Comparative Government at the University of Oxford (with distinction) in 2011. Prior to joining IE, Guillermo worked as Assistant Professor at Vanderbilt University. Before doing his PhD, he spent several years working on human development policy and programs at the World Bank, in Washington DC and across Latin America.

Guillermo works in the fields of comparative politics and political economy, with a regional focus on Latin America and Southern Europe, and a substantive focus on issues of development, governance, and corruption. His research focuses on relationships among state actors (politicians, bureaucrats, and anti-corruption agents) and how they shape public service delivery and human development. In his work, Guillermo uses big administrative datasets, surveys, and extensive qualitative fieldwork to shed light on dynamics of government accountability.

Some of Guillermo’s research has been published or is forthcoming in leading journals, including the American Journal of Political Science, the Journal of Politics, and the Annual Review of Political Science. He has also published a number of policy reports and book chapters.

SUBJECT DESCRIPTION

This course allows students to explore and scrutinize some of the key contemporary debates in comparative political science – or comparative politics. Comparative politics involves describing, comparing, and explaining political phenomena around the world. In today’s climate of increased political volatility and heightened political risk, a course in comparative politics forms an essential part of the education of any aspiring professional (both in the public and the private sectors) with an international outlook and a keen interest in cross-border affairs. It asks questions such as how do different countries’ political systems compare to one another and why are they similar or different? What effect does having a presidential form of government rather than a parliamentary one? Why do some countries have a multiparty political system while others have a two-party system? How do rules for elections differ across countries and what effects do they have on politics and representation? Students will get acquainted with studying human behavior embedded in institutions and what that entails for the larger system of representative democracy.

How do political systems around the world differ? What are the origins of such differences? What consequences do political systems and institutions have for economic, social, and human development? How can we make sense of historical and contemporary patterns of political development? And how can we leverage all that knowledge to intervene in the world and make it a better place to live?

This course introduces students to comparative politics, a broad subfield of political science preoccupied with providing answers to these and many other questions related to politics and its impact on human livelihoods.

The semester is organized in 5 blocks:

- First, a block of 5 sessions focuses on the field of comparative politics and the nature, emergence and development of the most important arena of contemporary politics -- the state.
- A second block of 4 sessions is dedicated to political regimes (democracy and authoritarianism, with their respective subtypes) and their survival.
- Next, a block of 4 sessions turns to varieties of political representation (parliamentarism and presidentialism, different types of elections, and electoral systems).
- Fourth, an 8-session block considers major political actors, including parties, voters, subnational authorities, courts, interest groups, and social movements.
- Finally, a block of 5 sessions wraps up the semester with group project presentations, a review session, and a final exam.

Through a combination of lectures, readings, discussions, workshops, and individual and group research, this course will build students’ ability to leverage the concepts, theories, and methods of comparative politics to think systematically through complex political and social problems, and to advance original, evidence-based arguments about them. The skills we build in this class will be useful for those seeking careers in sectors where analyzing complex social problems is valuable, be it in business, government, international organizations, or research.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

21th November 2023
1. Describe the key dimensions of variation in political systems around the world and how major countries in all continents differ along them.
2. Reflect critically about the origins and consequences of differences in political systems, with reference to established theories in political science.
3. Apply key concepts and theories of political science to debates about politics around the world.
4. Demonstrate social scientific literacy, including basic quantitative literacy, and apply it to the study and discussion of politics.
5. Use critical reading, autonomous research, and academic writing skills to build and present cogent and evidence-based arguments about politics.

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

IE University teaching method is defined by its collaborative, active, and applied nature. Students actively participate in the whole process to build their knowledge and sharpen their skills. Professor’s main role is to lead and guide students to achieve the learning objectives of the course. This is done by engaging in a diverse range of teaching techniques and different types of learning activities such as the following:

??This course will help you answer the questions posed above and will provide you with the tools to tackle more complex questions in comparative politics. The course will take a scientific approach to studying comparative politics and emphasize important concepts, theories, empirical questions and research findings. To this end, sessions will combine the explanation of theoretical concepts with practical activities such as doing exercises and class activities where appropriate. Students will prepare the readings before class.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS

Students are required to obtain the minimum grade of 5 required to pass the course. Students whose grade in the Final Exam is below 5 will fail the course. Dates and location of the final exam will be posted in advance and will not be changed.

Students must attend at least 80% of the sessions. Students who do not comply with the 80% attendance rule will receive a 0.0 on their first and second attempts and go directly to the third one (they will need to enroll in this course again the following academic year).

Students who are in the third or fourth attempt must contact the professor during the first two weeks of the course.

EXTRAORDINARY EXAMINATION POLICY:

Any student whose weighted final grade is below 5 will be required to sit for the extraordinary exam to pass the course (except those not complying with the attendance rules, whom are banned from this possibility).

Grading for retakes will be subject to the following rules:

- The extraordinary call will consist of a comprehensive exam or equivalent assignment. The grade will depend only on the performance on this exam; continuous evaluation over the semester will not be taken into account.
- Dates and location of the retakes will be posted in advance and will not be changed.
- The exam/assignment will be designed bearing in mind that the passing grade is 5 and the maximum grade that can be attained is 8 out of 10.
